

CIA: World oil reserves not so big

(c) New York Times

Washington — President Carter said Friday a new Central Intelligence Agency analysis showed that the world's reserves of oil and natural gas "are not as great as we thought they were."

Carter indicated that he would use figures from the analysis in an effort to build up public support for his national energy plan, especially higher energy prices and taxes.

The President is scheduled to address the nation on television Monday at 7 p.m. CST, a talk that is expected to focus primarily on why the new administration believes Americans must curtail their use of energy. Then, in a personal appearance before a joint session of Congress Wednesday at 7 p.m. CST, Carter is scheduled to deliver the plan and ask for speedy enactment.

Friday morning, shortly after Carter referred to the analysis during a televised press conference, the CIA said it could not release the document because it was classified, or secret. Later in the day, the agency said it had been instructed to withhold the study because Carter planned to quote from it liberally Monday night.

Carter's statement that reserves had been overstated came as no surprise to government analysts outside the CIA. The Federal Energy Administration and the State Department, for example, have contributed to analyses by international organizations that have warned of a tight world oil supply situation in the 1980s.

Especially startling have been forecasts that the Soviet Union's production is likely to peak in a year or two and that as it declines in the 1980s the Soviet Union could become an importer of oil, perhaps up to 3 million barrels a day by 1985.

In addition, there have been reports from academic and industrial sources that scaled back earlier estimates of expected production from China, Indonesia, Malaysia, Brazil and from such important oil states as Iran and Algeria.

From these facts and intelligence estimates, Carter and his energy adviser, James R. Schlesinger, have drawn the same conclusion reached by former Presidents Nixon and Ford — the United States must reduce its growing dependence on imported oil.

At stake, the administration officials believe, is the ability of the 13-country oil cartel (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries), to continue to jack up prices, possibly at great risk to world economic and financial stability, and the capacity of the United States to mediate the dispute over Israel's borders.

Officials said the message Carter would deliver Monday night was anticipated in part in the April issue of Foreign Affairs by Dankwart A. Rustow, distinguished professor of political science at the City University of New York. He wrote:

"Forecasts of future oil supply and demand in industrial countries drawn up under the immediate impact of the 1973 crisis have since been recognized as far too optimistic. Consumers have done little to curtail their use of energy in response to high prices; governments have been laggard in enforcing conservation and irresolute in promoting the development of alternatives to oil."

Some government analysts said Carter's emphasis on "reserves" — known deposits of oil and gas — gave too tight a focus to the evaluations that have been under way for months in Washington and in two Paris-based organizations, the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development and the International Energy Agency.

These studies, the analysts said, concerned not only reserves but the ability of countries to produce and deliver oil from known reserves and their willingness to produce at high levels. This question of willingness particularly involves Saudi Arabia. With enormous reserves of 170 billion barrels, it has been regarded for some years as the key to the world supply-demand balance.

There is a considerable doubt that Saudi Arabia would be willing to lift output from nearly 10 million barrels a day now to nearly 15 million in the middle 1980s. It is known, for example, that some Saudi ministers say their nation can't spend such enormous revenues prudently and that the oil would be better left in the ground.

Consultants to the two Paris organizations estimated recently that by 1985 the total demand for oil from the cartel countries could be in the range of 42 million to 49 million barrels a day. The physical ability of the 13 countries was rated at 44 million, but taking into account political and economic considerations the so-called "preferred" production level was put at 35 million barrels a day.

This unpublished assessment was less optimistic than the OECD's January forecast in its "World Energy Outlook" that total demand for OPEC oil might be 39.3 million barrels a day in 1985. Even so, the January report, taking account that desired production might be well below maximum capacity, anticipated "a close and uncertain balance" between supply and demand.

Another example of a growing gap between reserves and likely production, one pinpointed by Federal Energy Administration analysts, is Mexico. Although Mexico has been revising upward its estimates of oil in the ground, the analysts say it will have difficulty exporting much more than 1 million barrels a day by 1985, a level once anticipated for the late 1970s.

Exon: Aid change 'goof'?

Gov. J. James Exon says language omission in the Appropriations Committee's state school aid bill is either a "monumental goof" or a drastic change in the state aid program.

He said he recommended $55 million for state school aid, with $45 million for the school foundation and equalization fund and $10 million for distribution on a per-pupil basis. But he said the committee's LB532 omits the language and would result, if passed, in the $55 million all being distributed on the per-pupil basis.

His comments came in a letter to the Legislature.

Carter gets tax extension

Cindy spins yarn on back porch.

'Outdoors person' Cindy spins, weaves

By Patty Bouter
Star Staff Writer

Dare Cindy Doll to skin a squirrel and she'll do it.

Her little sister did just that several years ago and Cindy has been skinning squirrels ever since.

When you're an "outdoors person," as Cindy describes herself, plants and animals are easy to get along with.

With a home tanning kit, the 17-year-old Northeast High School senior worked on a raccoon her dad brought her. It was a little "ripe," Cindy recalls, and its hair fell out. "I do all these good things on the back porch," she added with a smile.

Some of the skins hang on her bedroom wall, while others are wrapped around crane and pheasant feathers she decorates for hats or wall-hangings.

A summer art retreat at Grandpa's Woods with the Lincoln Public Schools got her interested in dyeing wool. Her grandfather made her a drop spindle and she learned to spin. Then she put 125 hours into a weaving as a project for a fibers class.

Cindy hadn't considered selling her creation — "with weird stitches and feathers and all kinds of freaky little things in it" — until a teacher at school asked to buy it.

She agreed, but first the piece was entered in the Nebraska regional scholastic arts competition. It won a gold key. Cindy "borrowed" the weaving again so it could compete for a national prize in New York. It's still there and Cindy's awaiting the outcome. She's since sold another weaving and has been asked by a friend to do another.

Youth In Action

Cindy's method of weaving her geometric and free form designs calls for no preliminary sketching. "It just comes," she says. "I don't plan it until I get into the middle and maybe find a focal point."

Four-harness loom weaving, learned from her great-grandmother, was Cindy's only previous weaving experience. However, one of her rag rugs won a blue ribbon at the county fair.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard F. Doll, 5026 Madison, Cindy is a genuine interest in the way things used to be. Although she admits it isn't practical, she wouldn't mind going back to horse and buggy days for in-city travel.

For her part, she spends as much time as possible out of the city backpacking with the Nebraska Outdoor Encounter group and camping out with her family. She's always on the lookout for cattle skulls along the way.

"I know that sounds morbid," says Cindy, "but I think they're neat."

Her mother doesn't quite agree. That's one collection of Cindy's that stays outside.

Businessmen hail plan, but economists skeptical

New York (AP) — The business community, buoyed by earlier cancellation of a $50-per-taxpayer rebate plan, hailed the voluntary inflation-fighting program announced by President Carter Friday. But economists were skeptical the plan will work without government controls.

"Your anti-inflation message today is a most welcome step... especially in its emphasis on efforts to voluntarily restrain wage and price increases and, at the same time, increase productivity," General Motors Chairman Thomas A. Murphy said in a telegram to the President.

Michael Evans, president of Chase Econometrics, said the voluntary nature of the program is essential. "A program with wage and price controls would have been a disaster," he said. "It would have discouraged business considerably."

But asked if the plan would be effective in bringing the current 6 per cent rate of inflation down to about 4 per cent, Richard M. Young of Wharton Econometric Forecasting Associates at the University of Pennsylvania replied: "In a word, the answer is no."

"Did anyone ask Carter how he, as a peanut farmer, would react if someone asked him, 'Please hold down your prices.' I mean, he's been there."

Carter named a labor-management advisory team lead by AFL-CIO President George Meany and General Electric Chairman Reginald Jones to monitor the voluntary control program.

"It is the kind of program you develop when you feel you're not under any strong pressure," said Monte Gordon, vice president and director of research at the Dreyfus Corp. "Apparently Carter is unwilling to go to any direct government intervention. But as inflation increases, that's the line he'll take."

Economist Frank Magino of Texas Commerce Bankshares agreed.

"Although he makes it explicitly clear wage-price controls would be self-defeating, and I fully agree, I think there is the implicit threat that if the voluntary guidelines are completely ignored something mandatory may still be down the road somewhere."

The program, outlined in advance by various administration spokesmen, came as no surprise to Wall Street.

"The market had very little response to it, either positive or negative," Dreyfus' Gordon noted.

"It's neither a plus nor a minus, it's just there. The market has looked at and refocused its attention on energy. The inflation is more interwoven with the energy program than it is with any type of voluntary plan."

Penal improvements directed

By Don Walton
Star Staff Writer

Specific correctional program improvements have been directed by the Legislature's Appropriations Committee as part of its budget package.

The programs would be periodically evaluated by teams of appointed citizens, experts and judicial, gubernatorial and legislative representatives.

The evaluation effort is patterned somewhat after the role followed by teams monitoring areas of academic excellence recently established at the University of Nebraska.

The correctional program evaluation teams would meet quarterly with representatives of the Department of Correctional Services to study program improvements.

Targeted as areas for improvement by the Appropriations Committee were inmate labor, inmate activities, comprehensive health services, community based programs, chemical dependency, staff training and program planning.

The department is directed in the committee's budget bills to develop a three-year plan for improvement of those services at its institutions.

Here is what is specifically provided in the budget recommendations:

— $50,000 to develop a broader and more comprehensive range of jobs for offenders, using not only the current correctional industries program but other alternatives such as satellite industry programs, community work stations and work opportunities in state government.

— $75,000 to improve recreational programs at all institutions.

— $227,122 to improve health services at all institutions, including medical, dental and psychiatric care.

— $145,000 in state funds and $270,000 in estimated federal funds to initiate, develop and implement community based programs for offenders.

— $100,000 to expand existing chemical dependency programs and develop improved programs. Specific funds are allocated for development of programs at the Youth Development Centers at Geneva and Kearney and for the work and educational release programs.

— $30,000 to develop a comprehensive training program at the Nebraska Center for Women at York which will serve as a training module for all institutions.

— $50,000 in state funds and $100,000 in estimated federal funds for planning for the new institutions under construction. Included is money to hire a food service administrator to improve food service operations at existing institutions and plan for food service at the new ones.

Organized crime said taking over

By Jim Carndon
Star Staff Writer

Organized crime controls or is taking over large sections of America, a newsmen who helped investigate corruption in Arizona told members of the Nebraska Press Association Friday.

Bob Greene, editor of the Long Island, N.Y., paper Newsday, said "the mob" controls Chicago, Nevada, New York, Boston and Miami.

"It's about to take over Arizona," said Greene, who along with 35 other reporters probed events surrounding the murder of newsmen Don Bolles in Phoenix. The team turned out a 23-part series detailing links between organized crime and government officials in that state.

The stories took six months to research and write, Greene said. Some of the reporters stayed the entire time, others spent a week or two from their vacations.

"We found a state that had been run like a private club for 30 years," Greene said. Law enforcement agencies in the state were understaffed, and politicians and mobsters socialized openly, he added.

The team's story has been criticized by some of the officials named, including U.S. Sen. Barry Goldwater, and by members of the new media. Goldwater threatened to sue when a story linking him to crime figures was published, but Greene noted the senator has since changed his mind.

Two of the nation's leading newspapers, the New York Times and the Washington Post, have labeled the effort "pack journalism" because reporters from all over the country converged on Phoenix to do the work.

But Greene said the effort showed the solidarity of the American press because so many different personalities worked on the stories and managed to get the job done.

Being an investigative reporter isn't as glamorous as Hollywood has painted it in "All the President's Men," Greene said.

"None of it is pretty and hat flopped back and stop the presses," he said. "It's scrounge work."

One of the daily routines in Phoenix involved checking the garbage that was thrown out by people the team was investigating.

FDA plans to reduce routine feeding of antibiotics to animals

Washington (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration announced Friday it plans to order sharp reductions in the routine feeding of penicillin and tetracycline drugs to animals.

The FDA said it is concerned that adding the widely used antibiotics to animal feed could eventually endanger people by causing bacteria in animals to develop resistance or immunity to the common disease-fighting drugs.

The agency estimated that all turkeys, 30 per cent of chickens, 80 per cent of swine and veal calves and 60 per cent of beef cattle raised in the United States are routinely given penicillin and tetracycline to promote growth and prevent disease. The FDA proposal "should be viewed as a first step toward FDA's ultimate goal of eliminating, to the extent possible, the non-therapeutic use in animals of any drugs needed to treat disease in man."

FDA Commissioner Donald Kennedy admitted the agency knows of no specific human diseases that can't be treated because of resistance developed during the feeding of drugs to animals.

But "we are very concerned about the threat this may pose in the future," Kennedy said. "It is even possible that such problems could now exist but have gone unnoticed."

Regulations to implement the restrictions, which would not affect the use of the drugs by veterinarians to treat sick animals, are being drafted.

FDA's plan could permit use of reduced doses on a routine basis "in a few cases" when essential for prevention of disease in certain, unspecified animals. Details of the plan will be spelled out in the proposed regulations being drafted.

Carter's anti-inflation program omits wage and price controls

Washington (AP) — President Carter unveiled a program Friday aimed at reducing the nation's inflation rate to about 4 per cent by the end of 1979 without using wage and price controls.

He also said he would veto a permanent tax reduction favored by congressional Republicans in the unlikely event it passes Congress.

Carter announced at a White House news conference that he has enlisted the aid of AFL-CIO President George Meany and Reginald Jones, chairman of General Electric Co., to head a labor-management team to work with his administration in reducing inflation.

Most importantly this joint effort must be voluntary and cooperative and not be based on coercive or self-defeating controls," Carter said.

It appears Carter will be working with the same labor-management group that was originally established in 1974 to advise then-President Gerald R. Ford on economic matters. "Basically, it's the same group," said a spokesman for the AFL-CIO.

There are about eight members each from business and labor, with Jones and Meany heading the two sides. Former Labor Secretary John T. Dunlop, who set up the group for Ford, remains as chairman.

The group once had official status but has been meeting unofficially since Dunlop resigned as labor secretary last year.

Meany said in a statement after Carter's news conference that he and Jones have told Carter, "We would be willing to discuss with the President's advisers in a voluntary, nonofficial manner the major economic problems facing the nation."

Carter also said he hopes to meet later this year with Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev — possibly in the United States — and he sees no reason to alter the recent U.S. proposals for drastic reductions in nuclear weaponry.

And he said that although the White House staff has grown despite his campaign promise to cut it by 30 per cent, the increase is mostly to answer a flood of mail he has received since the election.

Charles L. Schultze, chairman of Carter's Council of Economic Advisers, said the administration's interim economic targets will be to reduce inflation to between 4 and 4.5 per cent by the end of 1979 and unemployment to between 5 and 5.5 per cent.

Recent inflation statistics show consumer prices rising at an annual rate of about 9 per cent, but Carter said the underlying inflation rate is around 6 per cent. Unemployment was 7.3 per cent in March.

Prices increased 4.8 per cent in 1976, but that rate was considered unusually low. The forecast for 1977 is about 6 per cent.

Progress in reducing the inflation rate below 6 per cent will be slow, Carter said, and will require a united national effort. "No one should look to government for easy answers because there are none."

Except for saving that Meany and Jones will work with the administration on its anti-inflation program, there was little in Carter's program that had not been revealed previously.

It lays considerable stress on reducing government paperwork and regulations that push up prices and provides for a strengthened Council on Wage and Price Stability to study price behavior and possible industry bottlenecks.

Carter pledged again to balance the budget by fiscal 1981 and said his administration will announce a "hospital cost containment program" later this month to slow spiraling medical costs.

Carter said killing his $50 rebate plan Thursday was made harder by the knowledge that some Americans already may have made purchases in anticipation of paying for the merchandise with the proposed rebates.

He said the $10 billion in rebates would have been made if the Senate had approved the plan in early March at the same time as the House. But since the economy has picked up in recent weeks, the rebates are no longer needed, he said.

The President misspoke at one point in saying he had proposed an "increased personal exemption" for individuals on their income taxes. Carter has proposed an increase in the personal tax deduction, but not the exemption. Former President Gerald Ford had proposed an increase in the exemption, from the current $750 per person, to $1,000.

Although Carter acknowledged that many of the components of his anti-inflation program may have

State figures give cautious support

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

President Carter's anti-inflation plan announced Friday drew cautious support from several persons interviewed by The Star.

"If President Carter's policy works, it will be the first time in a long time that labor, management and government have united for the common good," said U.S. Sen. Edward Zorinsky of Omaha.

The success of Carter's proposed voluntary efforts to control inflation will depend on the self-constraint displayed by the American people.

Zorinsky said he supported Carter's pledge to avoid wage and price controls, which he said should be used "only as a last resort to prevent economic bankruptcy."

The program is "a retreat of what has been done by previous administrations," said National Bank of Commerce president Paul Amen. He said he saw "nothing exciting" about Carter's plan, but added, "I'm all for cutting the deficit. I think that's admirable."

Bill Morse, plant manager for Brunswick Corp., agreed that a balanced budget "should be strived for." He was impressed that Carter has promised to cut government paperwork.

"The message sounds good," he said. "The U.S. people have always responded well to voluntary-type action."

State Democratic Chairman Dick White called the plan "a reasonable effort to get voluntary programs to hold down inflation." If Carter's plan works, it will be "preferable to anything else," White said.

"I would approve any voluntary efforts to control inflation," said State Republican Chairman Ann Batchelder.

Ed Day, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln economics professor, said he is glad Carter dropped been tried by previous administrations, he said his program differs from Ford's because he will not use unemployment to counter inflation — a tactic he said is "morally unacceptable."

"All of these things will be done simultaneously," he said. "I think they address the root causes of inflation and, at the same time, permit us to have expansion in our economy and a simultaneous reduction in unemployment."

Although Carter's anti-inflation program did not specifically contain the prenotification program for wages and prices he once said it would include, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal said the administration still hopes big business will give advance notice of major price increases.

Blumenthal described the commitment of business and labor to work with the administration on reducing inflation as "a formal agreement." But he said details of how the discussions with government would work and what specific actions they might take to reduce inflation remain to be worked out. In his statement, Meany made clear that the focus will not be entirely on inflation.

the proposed $50 per person income tax rebate, but was disappointed that the President has ruled out any permanent tax cut.

"A real tax cut would mean cost reductions to business, which would create an expanded supply of goods and services to bring prices down," he said.

But Day was encouraged by Carter's pledge to reduce the federal deficit, which he called "a step in the right direction."

On wage and price controls, Day said: "If strictly enforced, they produce shortages and suppressed inflation, which causes drastically increased prices when controls are lifted."

PTA to begin drive against TV violence

Chicago (AP) — In a plea for nonviolent television programming, the National Parent-Teacher Association announced a nationwide mail campaign Friday aimed at TV networks, local stations and prime time advertisers.

If the letter campaign by its 6½ million members does not reduce the amount of TV violence by Jan. 1, the PTA will consider boycotts of advertisers' products and of certain programs and possible court action, said William M. Young, PTA project director.

The letter project — called the First Action Plan — was an outgrowth of eight hearings the PTA held across the nation on TV violence. It officially will get under way July 1 and will include a nationwide program to train parents on how to monitor TV programs and how to most "efficiently and effectively" communicate their program desires to the networks, said Carol Kimmel, national PTA president.

The PTA believes that violence on TV is exaggerated and contributes to a paranoia among citizens that actual violence on the streets is worse than it really is, Young said.

"We don't think that people can watch mayhem, rape and murder night after night, week after week without affecting the quality of life in America," said Young.

The current target of the PTA is "gratuitous violence," which the association defines as violence put into programs to inject action in TV shows, said Mrs. Kimmel.

Depending on the success of the current crusade, however, the PTA may expand its efforts in the future to include violence in sports and violence shown on daily news shows, said Young.

He said the PTA will release a report in July that will show television violence contributes to aggressive behavior among youths, that some youths are incited to imitate violent acts they see on TV, that there is a growing desensitization among youths and adults because of the violence on TV, and that the perception of peaceful problem-solving methods in everyday life — such as discussion, negotiation and compromise — are greatly distorted by the prevalence of violent acts on TV.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance called Young to inform him that he had misrepresented American policy. However, a Vance spokesman said Young was not reprimanded.

Carter gives in on some water projects

(c) New York Times

Washington — President Carter approved Friday full or substantial funding for a number of the biggest water projects on his "review" list, apparently letting congressional pressure override his own preferences.

Announcement of some major approvals — most of the $1.6 billion Central Arizona Project and all of the $1.4 billion Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway in Alabama and Mississippi — filtered out through congressmen.

But some congressmen reported outright rejections by Carter, as in the cases of the $81.9 million Fruitland Mesa project and the $70.1 million Savery-Pot Hook project, both in Colorado.

Other projects were put off for still more study. Among them was the $148 million Narrows Unit Dam in Colorado, and the $900 million Auburn Folsom South Unit in California.

Sen. Quentin Burdick, D-M.D., reported that the $436.6 million Garrison Diversion Project in his state had been largely disapproved.

Judge plays auctioneer

San Jose, Calif. (AP) — It sounded like an auction, but the auctioneer was Superior Court Judge George Barnett.

He made the switch during a probate hearing on the fate of a classic 1936 Packard, part of the collection of the late Harold Gladwin of Saratoga. His executors found a dealer willing to pay more than the car's assessed value of $3,300.

But when the hearing opened, three other dealers showed up to ask for a chance to bid.

Acting as auctioneer, Barnett guided the spirited bidding. With a flourish, he yelled, "Going once, going twice, sold!" and pounded his gavel to mark the sale for $11,500.

Solar energy experiment set

Atlanta (AP) — A major experiment in large-scale commercial use of solar energy will be conducted by Georgia Power Co.

Spokesmen for the utility said it has been awarded a grant by the U.S. Energy Research and Development Administration to build a multimillion-dollar solar energy plant. The plant, with expected peak output of 500 kilowatts per hour, will provide power to a West German-owned textile manufacturing plant.

Engineers estimate that 60 to 90% of the knitwear plant's total energy needs will be met by the sun. Heat collected from the solar system will drive two turbines to produce electricity for the plant, while exhaust heat from the turbines will be pumped in to heat and cool the building.

Burning garbage for power appears uneconomical

By Gordon Winters
Star Staff Writer

A discouraging report on the economic advisability of burning garbage to generate electricity was heard Friday by the Lincoln Electric System board.

Power supply manager Phil Michaels told the board that adapting a plant to burn garbage would raise total construction costs by $11.5 to $15.5 million. Cost of a 500,000-kilowatt plant was estimated at $600 million.

Operating and maintenance costs might go up by as much as 60%, although LES officials still want to do more work on those figures, Michael said.

On a third point, Michaels said, the burning of garbage in the plant might prevent LES from falling back to cheaper forms of power in time of low demand.

The reason, Michaels said, is that boiler manufacturers will guarantee their equipment to burn garbage only if it operates at least at 50% capacity. If only coal were burned, the boiler could operate as low as 20%, according to LES administrator Walt Canney.

The LES information was compiled as part of the LES study on the advisability of building a generating plant near Lincoln, Michaels said. The proposed plant would use water from Lincoln's sewage treatment plant for cooling. It would probably be located between Waverly and Greenwood.

Michaels told the board it would not be until 1990 (assuming the generating plant began operating in 1985) that Lincoln's solid waste would have value as fuel to the generating station. In its first year of operation, Michaels said, it would cost LES about $12 a ton to burn garbage. After five years the garbage would be worth about $2.45 a ton and by 1995 it would be worth $13.25 a ton.

But, Michaels said, those figures do not count the cost of building a garbage treatment plant to separate combustible material from glass and metal and package it, or the cost of transporting the garbage.

The cost of building such garbage treatment plant was estimated at $13 million by the Ralph Parsons Co. in a 1976 study for the city.

Community interest in the prospect of using garbage as fuel has been fanned this week by a series of meetings sponsored by City Hall. Other meetings on the subject are slated for next week.

On another matter, the LES board gave its approval to an agreement under which LES will pay the Nebraska Public Power District about $13.5 million, mainly to acquire power lines and substations near Lincoln.

LES officials said the purchase involves 30 miles of 345-kilowatt line, 90 miles of 115-kilowatt line and six major substations on the outskirts of the city.

In addition the transaction will also lower the amount charged LES by NPPD for delivering electricity to Lincoln.

Pow-wow slated

The Council of American Indian Students is holding a pow-wow Saturday and Sunday in the ballroom of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Student Union, 14th and R Sts.

Indian dancers from several states are expected to participate in the dancing competition and crafts displays, according to council spokesmen. The dancing begins at 2 p.m. both days.

Dancers will compete in six categories: men's traditional dance, men's fancy war dance, boy's fancy war dance, women's shawl dance, women's buckskin dance and girl's shawl dance. Judging is based on quality of costumes and dance.

Road work begun

About five miles of a Lancaster County road, extending east from Firth to Highway 43, is under construction, according to the Nebraska Department of Roads.

Midwestern Contracting Co. of Omaha has the $93,119 contract for culvert installation. Thesen Brothers, Inc., and C and H Construction Co., both of Norfolk, have the $70,024 contract for grading.

Traffic will be maintained during construction.

Equipment stolen

More than $800 in camera and optical equipment was reported stolen from a Lincoln man's unlocked car.

The theft, which occurred sometime before 8:30 a.m. Friday, took place in the car of Paul J. Pack, 36, of 3515 Woods Ave., police said.

Taken were a 35-millimeter camera and lens valued at more than $500, plus a pair of binoculars and a monocular, police said.

Allan puts worth at $119,300

T.R. Allan, a 22-year-old real estate salesman, Friday became the fourth City Council candidate to reveal his financial worth. He pegged it at $119,300.

His assets, Allan said, include $1,000 in cash, $13,000 in automobiles and other personal property, $60,000 in the assignment of a second mortgage and $525,000 in the one-fourth ownership Apartments Unlimited.

Allan said his total liabilities for mortgages, loans and accounts payable are $479,700. He said he makes $27,000 a year through a $12,000 salary, $9,000 in property income and $6,000 from the assignment of the second mortgage.

Allan said he would declare a conflict of interest and disqualify himself from voting on any issue in which his business or personal gain would be involved.

"The question for voters to decide on May 3 is whether they want a candidate involved with the city or those in a vacuum with no interests other than the office they seek," Allan said.

Candidate Joe Hampton said he will file a list of all his real estate holdings with the city clerk, but he doesn't plan to make public his income tax statements.

Dorothy Walker, Sue Bailey and Leo Scherer have already released financial statements.

Automobile sought

A dark blue car damaged three poplar trees, two garbage cans and 175 feet of sod as it was driven through two southwest Lincoln lawns early Friday morning.

The car drove through lawns at 1923 S.W. 15th St. and 1432 W. Harbour Blvd. at about 2 a.m., police said. Police were looking for a dark blue car, possibly with damage received when hitting the garbage cans.

Woman assaulted

A 19-year-old Lincoln woman told police she was raped at knifepoint early Friday morning in her apartment on N. 31st Street.

The woman was awakened at about 2:30 a.m. by a man who had entered her apartment by unknown means. He threatened her with a knife with a four-inch blade, she said.

After the assault, the unknown assailant left through the front door, she said.

Bank elects officer

Richard L. Kearns was elected president Thursday of Lincoln Bank South. Kearns was formerly the bank's executive vice president.

The board of directors accepted the resignation of Roger Gohde, who resigned as president to accept a post with NBC Co., owner of the National Bank of Commerce.

The board also accepted the resignation of James Stuart Jr., who resigned as chairman after being elected president of NBC Co.

GOP leader slated

Mary Crisp, National Republican Committee Co-Chairman, will speak April 27-28 at the State Convention of Republican Women.

The convention is to be held at the Cornhusker Hotel in Lincoln. Mrs. Crisp is scheduled to address an April 28 luncheon.

The convention will also feature seminars on canvassing and registration.

Conservation cited

Cengas, the Lincoln Electric System and the University of Nebraska-Lincoln have been given awards by the Federal Energy Administration for fostering conservation.

LES and UNL were presented the awards for their joint participation in a solar-electric heat pump demonstration project. Cengas received its award for the thermogram program which surveyed heat loss from Lincoln homes through aerial photography.

Coors unit begun

Construction on the Coors of Lincoln warehouse began this week at 400 West Industrial Lake-Drive.

The all concrete, 20,000 square-foot building should be completed around the first of August and distribution from the site should begin at that time, George Easley said Friday.

Last month, Easley who is vice president of a local securities brokerage firm and his father, Robert Easley, Mutual Savings Co. of Lincoln board chairman, were named the Lincoln distributors for the Adolph Coors Company.

Rural child injured

A five-year-old rural Lancaster County girl was seriously injured Friday when she fell out of and was struck by the car driven by her mother.

Amy E. Gross was admitted to Lincoln General Hospital with multiple injuries. The accident occurred while her mother, Patricia A. Gross, was backing the car out of the driveway of their house near Roca, the Lancaster County Sheriff's office said.

Accountant fined

An official of a Lincoln plumbing firm pleaded guilty Friday to one count of failing to put funds from employees' salaries into a federal trust fund for social security and withholding tax.

Manuel Aguilar, 3519 J St., pleaded guilty to not depositing $302.58 in the trust fund. The U.S. attorneys office recommended that 13 other related counts against Aguilar be dropped.

Aguilar is the secretary for Aguilar Brothers Plumbing and Heating Co. A fine of $100 and probation was recommended by the U.S. attorney.

Couple arraigned

A man and woman were arraigned in Lancaster County Court Friday in connection with the alleged rape of a 20-year-old woman in their home Thursday night.

Eldon L. Koebel, 30, and Connie J. Koebel, 29, both of 226 N. 27th St., were each charged with sexual assault and released on a $2500 bond.

President Carter presents: 'Whip Inflation Now—Part II'

President Carter's anti-inflation program — the terms of which were broadly defined Friday — at first look has all the impact of a WIN button.

But it should have a soothing effect and it could be effective if the government makes good some Carter promises.

It should soothe the business community, coming as it did on the heels of Carter's decision to withdraw the $50 rebate proposal, and containing as it does a flat prohibition on wage and price controls or standby authority for such controls. That feature should appeal to labor, too, and labor might take slight comfort from Carter's observation that cutting jobs to fight inflation "is a morally unacceptable alternative."

The President proposes a joint labor-management team composed of big names to work with government officials in monitoring anti-inflation efforts and in developing economic goals for the country.

He asked for restraint in all segments of the economy in order to control inflation.

The President also promised stronger efforts in specific areas: "a hardhitting hospital cost containment program," U.S. participation in negotiations to stabilize world commodity prices, less government regulation and a balanced budget.

It is of course in the latter two areas that government can best lead the way in fighting inflation.

And we're not talking about taking the teeth out of government's necessary regulatory powers, but a reduction where possible of costly red tape and less regulation to encourage competition. And we're not talking about a balanced budget now or in the foreseeable future — the prospects for which are about zero — but about no-nonsense attempts to manage the size of the deficit.

When Carter finished talking about his anti-inflation program Friday one got the feeling he had not even begun to talk about it. The presentation, had, as we said before, all the impact of President Ford's Whip Inflation Now kick-off speech.

The private sector will be watching closely to see if Carter can carry off his part of the bargain.

Don't keep the lid too tight

In deciding on plans for the expansion of Memorial Stadium in Lincoln, the University of Nebraska Board of Regents must consider how genuine the demand for additional seats is now and what it is likely to be in the future.

The regents should, if possible, take a 'hard' look at applications for the proposed new seats to see what percentage, are requests by current season ticket holders, who may be looking only for better seats.

There is something to be said for using some restraint in planning for an addition to the stadium. The day may come when tickets for NU games may not be at such a premium because of higher ticket costs or sagging Cornhusker fortunes. But we doubt the demand will decrease dramatically.

The regents should not take too much of an elitist view — the view that it is better to have a lot of people waiting outside to get in, thereby appreciating NU football all the more when and if they are lucky enough to finally get a seat. The assumption that NU football is popular because only so many people can get in to see a home game can be shot full of holes.

Oil mingles with ink

Washington — Mobil Oil is toying with the idea of moving in on the middleman. For a long time Mobil has been using newspaper ads, about $1.5 million worth a year, to make editorial points. Now it is shopping for its own newspaper.

Mobil's purpose, we are assured, is nothing but good journalism — good journalism about business, mainly. Herbert Schmetz, the company's vice-president for public affairs, says that Mobil wants to upgrade the breadth and quality of business coverage, which, he says, is widely recognized as being below the level of other news coverage.

He says Mobil sees a place for a general circulation newspaper that would give business news the kind of deep, intelligent attention it gets from specialized papers like the Wall Street Journal and the Financial Times of London.

The company has looked at several prospects, but it is showing the most interest at the moment in the recently deceased Long Island Press. The staff of the Press has dispersed and its circulation list and many of its features have been sold. But there is still a name and a plant, and Mobil is talking to the Newhouse chain, which published the Press, about acquiring them.

Mobil representatives also have been looking into syndicates, which sell columns and other features to newspapers. In their discussions, they have said that the company is interested in owning a syndicate, but Schmetz says that is not so. He says a study of syndicates was ordered only because the company wanted to know more about that aspect of the news business.

Mobil is the second big oil company to become infatuated with printer's ink. Last year Atlantic Richfield bought a distinguished British weekly, the London Observer. Two separate occurrences do not make a trend, but they do add up in this case to an interesting coincidence.

One could not write a better game plan for the quiet invasion of the news business by the energy industry. The Arco purchase of the Observer was almost an act of mercy. The paper was foundering and sharks were circling. When Robert O. Anderson, Arco's president, offered rescue with a promise that the paper would be allowed to maintain its traditional high quality, all concerned were grateful. In this country, the purchase of a British paper by an American oil company caused scarcely a ripple. But a precedent had been set.

Now if Mobil revives the Long Island Press, who's to complain? Nobody loses. The public gets back a newspaper it had lost, and news people get back jobs that had gone down the drain. The press unions are reported to be receptive, and no wonder.

The thing to watch for next is the purchase of a viable, important American newspaper by one of the energy companies or one of the other big multi-billion-dollar conglomerates. Or maybe there will be a deal involving one of the newspaper chains. A company like Mobil, with $25 billion in annual revenues and close to a billion dollars in profits, could handle that with no trouble at all.

Rep. Morris K. Udall of Arizona announced recently that he would urge Congress to include newspapers in a federal study of the concentration of economic power. In so doing, he noted that 25 newspaper chains control more than half the daily newspaper circulation in this country.

The companies that publish some of our leading newspapers, including the Washington Post, the New York Times and the Los Angeles Times, are communications giants, with interests in book publishing, magazines, broadcasting, news services and the production of their raw material — paper.

So big business is nothing new to the press. What is new is the apparent willingness of companies in an industry that has a vital stake in public policies to buy their way into the channels of communication.

In journalism we sometimes succumb too easily to the temptation to use the First Amendment as evidence of the special status of the press in the democratic scheme of things. Nevertheless, it is hard to equate a press that can be owned and controlled by a dominant economic interest with the press the writers of the Bill of Rights set out to protect.

WE STILL BELIEVE IN THE AMERICAN Credo OF FAIR PLAY—

WHICH IS TO HAVE CONFIDENCE IN OUR LEADERS...

WHILE TRYING TO FIND WAYS TO REPLACE THEM—

Washington — While Andrew Young was "explaining" to reporters at the State Department that the United States was incited to be "paranoid" about a few thousand communists in Africa, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance was passing the word to influential congressional leaders that the White House has decided to send more military aid — some $13 million in so-called "non-lethal" weapons — to Zaire.

This suggests, at the most obvious level, that Andy Young may be far less influential on policy than the attention he receives from the press would lead you to believe. Young has been adamantly and, according to those in a position to know, vehemently opposed to sending more help to Zaire.

What is more significant, however, is that the incident suggests that the UN ambassador is less Jimmy Carter's point man on foreign policy, as Young himself once described it, than a cannon rolling loose on the deck of a pitching ship. Indeed, rather than taking the lead in outlining administration thinking,

Jack Germond
Jules Witcover

Andy Young seems to have assumed a role as a kind of internal critic of that policy.

He had no sooner held his press conference at the State Department, for example, than he flew off to Lansing and publicly disparaged the importance of the action the White House had taken against the Soviet trawlers fishing in United States waters.

Young pictured the Soviet ships as if they were comparable to barefoot boys with bamboo poles, describing the violations as "a single or two Soviet fishermen who are violating the law" when the illegal catch ran more than 100 metric tons. And although Carter had chosen to make a serious and very visible point of calling the Russians to account, Young added: "We ought not make an international incident out of everybody who breaks the law."

That was not likely to sit well at the State Department, but up to now there has never been even a hint, public or private, that the President has lost patience with Young. The two men enjoyed a close personal and political relationship long before Jimmy Carter was being taken seriously as a national figure by the know-it-alls in Washington, and that is the kind of thing Jimmy Carter remembers. Thus, even when Young offended the British with his criticism of their racism, Carter's reaction was said to be that Young knew he had slipped and that it wasn't necessary for him to make the point.

Indeed, Young has always been a sensitive politician, as well as an intelligent and articulate one. When Carter stumbled into trouble on "ethnic purity" a year ago, he was the single most influential force in persuading the candidate he had blundered and needed to take steps to make amends. And it is that history that confounds even his friends as they try to understand what he is up to these days.

"I agree with almost everything he says," an influential Democratic senator said, "but it's not just a question of being frank in his position. It's making certain there won't be any ramifications from what you say."

It's hard to argue with that. The British have indeed been guilty of racism at times. We are indeed sometimes paranoid about the commies. The Russian trawlers are not the only ones that have fished in someone else's waters. But, as the British ambassador to the United Nations, Ivor Richard, was so good to point out, Andy Young is a diplomat now, not a politician or preacher.

And, more to the point, in the cases of Zaire and the Soviet trawlers, what Young has been saying runs directly contrary to White House policy. There is nothing new about differences of opinion within an administration on foreign policy in the decision-making stage, but Young has gone beyond that.

So far, the administration's attitude has been that Andy Young reflects the new, self-confident openness of Jimmy Carter, that Young is the living proof that this administration is tolerant of dissent and unafraid of candor. But if that is what Young is about, the result is quite different: a picture of conflicting signals on United States policy, of a studied ambiguity under which the President does one thing and a man known as one of his most intimate associates says quite another.

Jimmy Carter has never been reluctant, as a politician, to be ambiguous when that seemed the most efficacious. Whether he can run a government and — more to the point — a foreign policy that way is another question.

"WE HAVE THE ART BUCHWALD AND JACK ANDERSON COLUMNS — WHERE'S THE ANDREW YOUNG COMMENT OF THE DAY?"

Garbage journalism has a bad smell

Ron Hendren

Washington — If it is true that many politicians seem to go to great lengths to separate themselves from the electorate — and look around you, it is — then it's equally true that the public often gives its politicians plenty of reasons to do just that.

A case in point: Two weeks ago Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel entered a hospital near here, suffering, his doctors said, from symptoms that could mean he had had a mild stroke. The hospitalization came just a few days before Mandel was scheduled to go on trial on corruption charges.

You should have heard people howl, doctors and staff at the hospital included, and members of the press in the fore.

Initial stories about the "stroke" were not only skeptical, some bordered on being downright derisive. It was emphasized that only the governor's personal physician, not other specialists called in for consultation, would use the word "stroke" in characterizing his problem. It was carefully explained that only Mandel's doctors, his immediate family and bodyguards were allowed to see him. It was stressed that those around him prior to his hospitalization had detected no signs of illness. It was alleged that hospital employees who would normally have access to patient records were being denied Mandel's.

And so on. But enough, you get the picture.

Well, turns out the man has had a stroke. Numbness of the muscles in the hand and foot on one side, with problems in moving the muscles on the same side of his face. He also has been suffering losses in his train of thought. All doctors who have been called in agree, and those consulted don't owe Mandel a thing except their honest medical judgment.

Did the press repent? Oh, no. The story that Mandel had in fact suffered a mild stroke was printed all right, but along with that came continuing reports — flying in the face of known facts — that somehow the thing was a sham. In one account there was this quote, attributed to an unnamed physician: "I think anyone in his (Mandel's) position would have had a stroke if they knew it would get them out of going to court."

That is just garbage journalism. For all I know, Marvin Mandel may be the purveyor reincarnate of original sin, he may be guilty of everything and more of which he is charged, but as of this date he has been convicted of nothing. And the charges against him (such as, mail fraud because he posted a copy of the transcript of one of his press conferences in which, according to prosecutors, he lied) are, frankly, pretty poor pickings for the U.S. attorney to come to court with.

But never mind, leave the charges alone: The trial and time will answer them.

What rankles now is that people — especially journalists — won't even let the man have a stroke in peace.

It is a strange journey we are into, this drive to destroy anything representing power, and it bodes no good for any of us. No wonder talented people of goodwill are shying away from politics these days. If we continue on our present course without checking ourselves, the same may one day be said of journalism.

trade. But there is a limit to what the workers of this city must endure in the name of a (free trade) principle few have heard of."

But Moynihan knows better than most members of the Senate that the principle of free trade produces more exports and more jobs in this country as a whole than it loses through competitive imports from abroad, but he is now doing, though he knows better, what most senators do in defending their local, personal and political concerns.

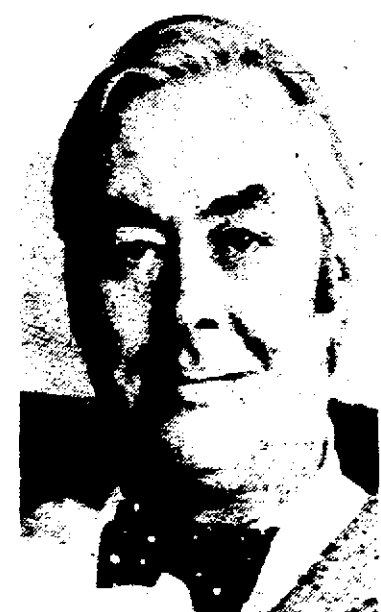

He has obviously a grievous local problem in the New York garment industry, but he is not putting it in perspective. He is an educator and an historian by tradition, but he is not educating. He is dramatizing the particular rather than explaining the general problem of international trade.

In fact, he is even threatening Carter on trade policy. "I send this friendly warning to the (Carter) administration," he said in the garment district this week.

"Go out and get a good agreement, a fair agreement. If you don't, don't come back, and for sure, don't come back to the Senate Finance Committee, of which I am a member."

This is important only as a symbol of the worst problem Carter is going to have to face when he presents his energy, trade, disarmament and tax policies to the Congress. Everybody is for Carter's policies against waste, pollution, pork-barrel water projects, tax rip-offs, and defense cutbacks until they hit the interests of their local constituencies.

Carter would like to believe that the American people would conserve fuel,

Moynihan ... speaks now for New York

better than almost any other member of the Senate. Edmund Burke defined the issue of local versus national responsibilities in representative government in his famous speech to the Electors of Bristol, as long ago as Nov. 3, 1774.

"Certainly, gentlemen," Burke said, "it ought to be the happiness and glory of a representative to live in the strictest union, the closest correspondence, and the most unreserved communication with his constituents. But his unbiased opinion, his mature judgment, his enlightened conscience, he ought not to sacrifice to any man, or to any set of men living."

"Parliament is not a Congress of ambassadors from different and hostile interests. Parliament is a deliberative assembly of one nation with one interest — that of the whole, where not local purposes, not local prejudices ought to guide, but the general good, resulting from the general reason of the whole."

This is the principle that will now be tested in the coming struggle for policy between the President and the Congress over energy and trade. Carter has infuriated the textile industry, the shoe industry, and the television industry by indicating that he will not sacrifice the nation's exports in order to give them the protection they want against foreign imports.

The chances are that all this will be decided in the end by Carter's ability to persuade the Congress of Edmund Burke's principle. "You choose a member indeed," he told the voters of Bristol, "but when you have chosen, he is not a member of Bristol, he is a member of Parliament."

Criminal code's riot laws stricken

Associated Press
On a 28-0 vote, the Unicameral Friday struck from the proposed criminal code riot laws drafted in the late 1960s.

Omaha Sen. Ernest Chambers led the effort to eliminate the riot sections in LB38, language added under the influence of former Sen. Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff in the 1969 session.

Chambers described the laws as unconstitutional and riddled with potential for abuse whether there was a riot or not. He challenged the pages of riot law from the beginning definition to the end.

The definition of riot, Chambers said, can include any two or more persons attempting to commit a felony of misdemeanor.

"That could be someone starting a fight or stealing a bicycle," Chambers said. The penalties for a hypothetical riot offense, he contended, could be more severe than for the offenses covered by other laws.

Among other provisions Chambers criticized were restrictions on transfer or sale of liquor in one's own home, possession of a bullhorn or other amplifying device, including "a rolled newspaper or a loud radio"; closing of public buildings, sale of combustible materials, and the power for a mayor, county board chairman or governor to declare an emergency.

Any of those executives could declare an emergency on the slightest provocation, including bike stealing, Chambers said, and could allow open-ended appointments of prosecutors and judges.

Another provision prohibited provocative gestures in an assembly, Chambers said as he demonstrated by example one made by former Vice President Nelson Rockefeller at a political convention.

Sen. Ernest Chambers sees room for abuse.

Chambers said the laws were passed by a "panic-inspired Legislature" and he said Carpenter was thinking of him when the laws were passed. Chambers was an antiwar activist before his election to the Unicameral in 1970.

Judiciary Committee Chairman Wally Barnett of Lincoln put up only token opposition to Chambers' move to strike the laws and he acknowledged that Chambers' position was correct.

Sens. John DeCamp of Neligh and Douglas Berouter of Uteka also supported Chambers.

"Terry knew that if we had a rock concert in Nebraska we'd go to hell in a hand cart," DeCamp said.

"If Hitler had had this he could have gone a lot farther a lot faster," DeCamp added, "and it gives mayors of small towns the power to declare martial law."

Chambers said he was not surprised that the amendment was adopted, adding that when the Unicameral struck antisyncretism laws earlier in the week he thought he had a good chance to strike the riot laws, too.

Chambers, who has opposed the code revision and moved Thursday to delay further debate on it, said "with a few more amendments" he may support it.

In other action on the code, the Unicameral set a 25-year sentence with no parole for second offense of first-degree sexual assault in a proposal offered by South Sioux City Sen. J.R. Murphy.

Murphy said that rape "is probably the worst offense in that book."

Lawmakers rejected on a 13-11 vote an amendment offered by Omaha Sen. Neil Simon that would have made an exception for statutory rape. Statutory rape involves a minor, consenting or otherwise.

Prison term revision said solid

Associated Press
The State Justice Department told Omaha Sen. Neil Simon Friday that his latest prison term amendment to the bill abolishing the death penalty would do what he hoped.

"We believe that this proposed amendment would guarantee, subject to the power of the Pardon Board to commute sentences, that no person convicted of first-degree murder would be paroled or discharged from prison in less than 30 years regardless of the good time law provisions, but would at the same time allow the good time provisions to apply to a person once he had completed the 30-year sentence," an official opinion from the attorney general's office said.

Simon has rewritten the amendment several times in an effort to make certain a first-degree murderer would serve at least 30 years but be eligible for release after that. The amendment calls for a 30- to 90-year prison term with the minimum fixed at 30.

Simon offered the idea as a method of allaying fears and worries of colleagues who want to make certain there is some deterrent in law against murder and that murderers aren't released on parole after only a few years.

The bill involved, LB64 introduced by Omaha Sen. Ernest Chambers, would abolish executions in Nebraska. It has sparked controversy whenever it has come up for debate.

Simon apparently will offer his revised amendment the next time action is taken on the bill.

Sen. Glenn Goodrich awaits six more votes.

Committee forwards maintenance bill

Associated Press
The Unicameral's Appropriations Committee voted 6-1 Friday to advance to the floor legislation designed to insure that preventive maintenance is done on state buildings.

The bill, LB309, establishes a special task force to follow priorities outlined in the measure for determining what state buildings require such maintenance or renovation and in what order.

The bill also sets up a legislative committee to act as watch-dog on the program, which would take three years.

The task force would go out of existence in 1980 and the legislative committee, after reviewing the work, in 1981.

Funds involved in the maintenance program would be appropriated to the governor, who would dispense them for work done on the basis of the task force's advised priorities.

Some of the work would be completed by regular state employees and other work would be completed on a contract basis.

The measure was put in final form for advancement by an amendment adopted unanimously but Omaha Sen. Glenn Goodrich expressed his mild opposition to the program when he cast the dissenting vote on sending the bill to the Unicameral floor.

Licenses to require photographs

Associated Press
State senators passed legislation Friday requiring color photographs on Nebraska drivers' licenses, but an accompanying funding bill fell short of the number of votes necessary for passage.

Unicameral members voted 25-15 to pass LB90, Omaha Sen. Glenn Goodrich's measure to require color photos on licenses beginning next year. The license fee would increase from $5 to $7.

Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan, who was presiding, ruled that LB90A required 30 votes for passage because the $66,000 program start-up funds it would appropriate was not a part of Gov. J. James Exon's budget recommendations.

The state constitution requires 30 votes for bills appropriating more than was in the governor's budget.

The vote on LB90A was 25-13, but Goodrich said six supporters of photos on licenses were absent Friday. He said the issue would come up again Monday.

Before LB90 passed, Omaha Sen. Ernest Chambers mounted an unsuccessful last-ditch effort to kill it. Chambers charged again that such state-mandated identification with photos had sinister implications for privacy rights. His stance was rejected 13-24.

Among other measures, lawmakers passed LB337, which would increase maximum weekly unemployment benefits from $80 to $90. Omaha Sen. William Brennan's bill won 29-12 final passage.

Accepting rail land for trail endorsed

Associated Press
State senators voted 29-1 Friday to pass a resolution allowing the Game and Parks Commission to accept 1.8 miles of abandoned railroad right of way land near Kearney for a hiking and biking trail.

Lincoln Sen. Wally Barnett cast the dissenting vote after saying farmers had convinced him they should have first opportunity to buy such land rather than letting state agencies acquire it.

Barnett earlier had introduced a bill, LB24, to allow state agencies to purchase such land without legislative review on each proposal, but the measure stirred heavy opposition from farmers and was killed by the Public Works Committee.

The resolution allows the commission to accept the portion of the old Fort Kearney trail after it is purchased by the Fort Kearney Preservation, Recreation and Development Board.

The issue was aired Thursday in the Constitutional Revision and Recreation Committee during a hearing on a bill, LB527, but was passed in resolution form Friday because that was all that was required to handle the matter.

Groundwater protection bill advanced to floor

Associated Press
The Legislature's Public Works Committee Friday advanced to the floor the Nebraska Groundwater Protection Act, creating an examining board and requiring testing and licensure of water well drillers and septic tank installers and pumps.

The bill, LB247, was introduced by the committee.

Big Springs Sen. Jack Mills was the only senator voting against advancement.

Although the bill is designed to protect groundwater from pollution, Mills said the bill is misnamed. He said it requires only licensing, but allows current operators not to take the examinations.

The bill was amended to strike protection from "waste," thereby avoiding any confrontations over irrigation issues.

The committee also advanced LB248, another committee bill increasing the fees vehicle dealers pay to conduct their businesses. The bill also raises fees for dealers' license plates.

Those fees would be raised from $15 to $30 per set and dealers would be eligible for additional sets of plates for each 20 vehicles sold, rather than for each 10 vehicles, as the law now states.

The committee killed LB429, Omaha Sen. Glenn Goodrich's bill to require the Public Service Commission to establish rates of return for public utilities such that the utilities may obtain debt capital at least cost.

State board censures 4 real estate brokers

The Nebraska Real Estate Commission announced Friday it has censured two Lincoln real estate brokers for improperly handling a transaction last summer.

The commission censured Keith B. Johnson, a salesman for C. G. Smith Realty Co., and Katherine A. Hartman, branch manager of the C. G. Smith Lincoln office.

The commission charged that Ms. Hartman failed to "properly supervise" Johnson, who was allowed to submit false documents to Commercial Federal Savings and Loan Association of Lincoln last July.

Johnson prepared the documents in connection with a loan application made by a Lincoln couple. The papers indicated the couple had paid C. G. Smith $2,000 as an earnest deposit on the property they were buying.

The commission said, however, that the money wasn't paid to the firm nor to anyone else at the time the purchase agreement was submitted to Commercial Federal.

Johnson violated a commission rule when he submitted the falsified papers to the loan association, the commission concluded, while Ms. Hartman demonstrated her incompetence to act as a broker, the commission said.

The commission also announced Friday it has censured two other brokers, Fred E. Klug of Arlington, and Mildred Wallace of Bellevue.

The commission ruled that Klug broke rules in several transactions involving the deposit of earnest money into accounts. Ms. Wallace was accused of charging a client a one per cent discount when no such fee had been charged by the loan company.

Discrimination bill receives initial approval

Unicameral member gave first-round approval Friday to legislation barring employment discrimination based on sex or age.

The bills, LBs 161 on sex and 162 on age, also revise some procedures of the Equal Opportunity Commission, which hears cases involving employment practices.

Both the bills were advanced without opposition after some minor amendments were added.

Also advanced over its initial floor hurdle was LB390, the bill raising from a quarter-cent to a half-cent the check-off per bushel of wheat to develop markets for the grain.

Judges allow limited access to secret grand jury records

By Jim Camden
Star Staff Writer

Prosecutors probing corruption in the city of Omaha and the state court system will be allowed to peek behind the cloak of secrecy surrounding a federal grand jury.

Two years ago, the grand jury returned indictments against 18 men in a roundup of one of the largest gambling rings in the country. The indictment said former Omaha Assistant City Attorney Anthony Troia and other state and city officials were involved. Troia was given immunity from prosecution for his testimony.

That indictment brought requests from the Omaha city attorney's office, the Nebraska State Bar Association, the Nebraska Commission on Judicial Qualifications and Omaha Sen. Ernest Chambers for information received by the grand jury to probe allegations of corruption in elected and appointed government officials.

Three of the requests were partially granted Friday in an order from three federal district judges. Chambers' request, which was made on behalf of the Legislature's Judiciary Committee, was denied.

We say categorically that there is no evidence in the transcript of any misdemeanor by any civil officer, past or present, of the State of Nebraska," said Judges Warren K. Urbom, Robert V. Denney and Albert G. Schatz.

The judges said that the Legislature may only impeach state officers, and since none were implicated, Chambers' request was denied.

The other three groups will receive the names of witnesses who implicated officials and attorneys over which the groups have jurisdiction. They will not receive transcripts of the testimony, only a general description of what was said.

The State Bar Association discipline committee will have access to a list of witnesses who implicated lawyers. The state judicial commission will have access to a list of witnesses who implicated judges. The Omaha city attorney will have access to a list of witnesses who implicated city officials and employees.

The three groups were directed to interview the witnesses, then submit the testimony to the judges, who would check it against the grand jury transcript.

"The contents of the foregoing lists will be kept as fully confidential as possible by those to whom they are disclosed," the order stated.

In explaining the order, the judges said that grand jury proceedings have traditionally and constitutionally been kept secret.

"This indispensable secrecy of grand jury proceedings must not be broken except where there is a compelling need," the judges noted, citing an earlier U.S. Supreme Court ruling.

The judges said, however, that a lack of confidence in public officials resulting from allegations of corruption is serious enough to warrant the order for limited information.

Status of public education argued before state ed board

By J. L. Schmidt
Star Staff Writer

Members of the State Board of Education spent several hours Friday listening to testimony on the status of public education in Nebraska.

The good and the bad were presented during the regular meeting of the board at the State Department of Education in Lincoln, following a plea from board member Don Lienemann of Papillion to "mandate a return to the basics" in all public schools.

Lienemann and S.H. Brauer Jr. of Lincoln gave the critical side, attacking declining test scores, the teaching of controversial subjects in the schools and students' lack of respect for teachers.

Two representatives of the Nebraska Council of School Administrators, Ron Bernth of Millard and Harley Rector of Norfolk, spoke in defense of the schools.

Lienemann has pushed for a stronger board stand on the basics in the past. Friday he repeated an earlier statement that the State Board of Education and the State Department of Education are both at fault for not enforcing the basics in every curriculum.

You have no knowledge, fellow board members, unless you can get into the classrooms and find out what's going on," Lienemann said.

Board member Marilyn Fowler, and others, took issue with that statement, noting that they have children and know what's happening in the schools.

Lienemann asked that the board go on record with a statement asking for "mandatory return of all schools to the three R's, before this day is out, and that no child go beyond grade four, unless he can master them—the reading, writing and arithmetic skills."

Board President Frank Landis said, "Don has raised some questions which need serious probing, but we need to determine what can be done constructively to improve the picture."

He suggested that a further discussion be placed on the agenda for next month's board meeting.

Brauer, an executive officer of the Nebraska School Improvement Association, asked the board to "reverse and rewrite the policy concerning the teaching of controversial issues, approved nearly a year ago."

Brauer called the teaching of such things as MACOS (Man, A Course Of Study), "abuses and misuses of so-called academic freedom."

"Public schools are bent on taking a paganistic view. We're not teaching right from wrong, we're saying we have no position," he said.

Brauer used the state mottoes of Colorado and South Dakota, both with references to God in them, as examples of "where our thinking should be."

"This board can put its head in the sand, and say that nothing is happening, but abuses are still there," he added. "We don't even let our children sing Christmas carols in school anymore."

Bernth, president of the Nebraska Association of Elementary Principals, and director of elementary education for the Millard Public Schools, cautioned the board not to "jump from symptom to cure without deciding what the cause may be."

He noted a general lack of teacher strikes, a sound structure and quality teaching as three plus factors in the schools.

"The average Nebraskan has 12.2 years of education, and the number of Nebraskans without a high school diploma has dropped from 32% to 43% in the past 10 years," he said.

Rector, president of the Nebraska Association of Secondary Principals and principal of Norfolk Junior High, said earlier testimony had left him feeling "rather demoralized."

"In 23 years of teaching I'd like to think I have had some positive effect on the lives of my students," he added.

Central Nebraska's population growing, or shrinking less, in 70s

Central Nebraska population changes indicate out-migration from the area is halting and in some cases reversing the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln said Friday.

Central Nebraska is bounded by Nebraska's north and south borders, and from Ogallala to around Grand Island.

Since the 1970 census of population was taken, the most rapidly growing counties in central Nebraska were estimated to have been, Lincoln (16.7%), Chase (15.5%), Loup (12.5%), Keith (12.2%), Gosper (10.7%), Dawson (7.1%), Blaine (6.1%), Buffalo (5.1%), Brown (4.9%), Garfield (4.9%), and Hall (4.8%) counties.

All these counties have grown more rapidly than the state average of 4.5% since 1970.

By 1974, for example, Lincoln County was the fastest growing county in the state, it maintained third-place ranking by 1976. Gosper County ranked sixth by 1974 and maintained eighth place by 1976. The 1976 population estimates reveal additional central Nebraska counties joining the ranks of the state's "boom" counties, notably Chase County (5th ranking), Keith County (7th), and Dawson County (12th).

Population increases from 1975 to 1976 were notable for Adams and Buffalo counties. Hall County continues to grow more rapidly than the state.

In the north central region of Nebraska, the 1976 population estimates suggest some interesting contrasts to historical population growth patterns, the bureau noted.

In certain counties in and just south of the Sandhills, the out-migrations of population during the 1960s have apparently slowed or reversed in the 1970s. Slight net immigrations of population to Brown, Rock, Holt, Hooker, Blaine, Loup and Garfield counties were experienced from 1970 to 1976.

One of the unique characteristics of south central Nebraska's population is the prevalence of "natural decline" counties, particularly along the state's southern border, the bureau said. "Natural decline" occurs when the number of deaths exceeds the number of births in an area.

Central Nebraska county-by-county figures follow:

County	1976	1975	Percent Increase

South Americans lack cash for wheat

By Dominick Costello
Farm Editor

The vice chairman of the Nebraska Wheat Advisory Committee found South Americans eager to buy U.S. wheat, but lacking the foreign exchange (hard cash) to do it.

"We need to expand credit to these countries. They could also benefit from the government's PL480 program to help poor countries eat better," said Robert Pearson of Plymouth.

Pearson spent several days touring six countries as a member of the board of directors of Great Plains Wheat, a wheat promotion group partially financed with Nebraska wheat checkoff funds.

Pearson said Brazil and Venezuela have good reserves of foreign money because they are major exporters of agricultural products and oil, respectively. Other countries are chronically short of credit.

"All the countries we visited grow some wheat. They buy wheat wherever it is cheap. Much of their bread is a blend of wheat flour, corn flour, a crop that looks like our millet is ground, and all sorts of things go into bread," he said.

"Most of the bread I saw on the trip was the French type," he said. "Quality was less than good."

Pearson helped launch a program aimed at teaching bakers how to make better bread. "It was a baking school that desperately needed equipment. They needed everything."

The school, in Bogota, Colombia, will sell the product of its students at a price high enough to support the school, they hope.

"The quality of U.S. wheat getting to the countries we visited is pretty good. We had only two reports of dirty wheat," Pearson said.

He said wheat from Argentina and Canada is also of good quality. "We followed a Canadian team that was selling wheat, but we feel we still have the lion's share of the market outside of Argentina," he said.

"Argentina is out of wheat at the moment so our sales should pick up," he added.

Pearson did get to see one dairy farm in Chile where workers milked 160 cows by hand. "They had 15 employees and not much in the way of equipment, but they did have good electric-powered irrigation pumps from deep wells," he said.

"There is a tremendous need for more market development for wheat. They would import wheat if they had the funds, but they also need to improve their bread," he said.

Pearson inspected dozens of mills, bakeries, (general academic) schools, and vocational and technical schools, all supported by Great Plains Wheat in an effort to create more demand for wheat by improving the quality of bread.

State Digest

- ### Break-in suspects nabbed
- Phillipsburg, Kan. (AP) — Sheriff Leroy Stephen reported three teen-age boys who ran away from their homes at Kensington, Kan., were picked up Friday in nearby Nebraska and were being held as suspects in a break-in at a store at Naponee, Neb. They are 13, 15 and 17 years old and had been the subject of a four-county search after they disappeared. Officers reported money, guns and ammunition were taken in the Naponee burglary.
- ### Power studies okayed
- Hastings (AP) — The Hastings Public Works Board gave final approval Friday to two studies concerning the city's future power supply. The board approved hiring two consulting firms, Clarence Hoper and Associates of Kansas City, and Black and Veatch of Denver. The two studies will cost an estimated $7,500.
- ### Sewer work approved
- Grand Island (AP) — The State Department of Environmental Control has notified the City of Grand Island that it approved two of the city's sewer expansion projects. Grand Island City Engineer Gene Rasmussen said the two were part of six projects delayed by a three-month DEC moratorium.
- ### Tree meetings set
- The Nebraska Highway Commission and the Nebraska Department of Roads will hold public information meetings at Stromsburg and Alexandria this month about trees which will be affected by projects in those areas. At 7:30 p.m. April 25 at the Alexandria Community Hall, a meeting will discuss a segment of Highway 53 in Thayer County. A 7:30 p.m. April 27 meeting at the Viking Hall in Stromsburg will deal with the proposed replacement of the existing bridge over the Big Blue River south of Shelby on U.S. 81 and the proposed 3 1/2 mile improvement of U.S. 81, beginning a mile south of the York I-80 interchange and running north to York.
- ### Equipment buy endorsed
- Hastings (AP) — The Adams County Health Planning Council has endorsed the purchase of specialized X-ray equipment for Mary Lanning Hospital in Hastings.

Seasonal ag jobs lower jobless rate

Associated Press
The seasonal increase in agricultural employment was the major reason Nebraska's unemployment rate dropped from 5.2% in February to 5% in March, the state Labor Department said Friday.

In March of 1976 the percentage of the state's unemployed was 6.5%. The total Nebraskans unemployed in March was 34,700 compared to 35,400 in February and 45,400 in March of last year.

Lincoln's unemployment rate decreased slightly from 3.8% in February to 3.7% in March. In March, 1976, the percentage was 5.8%. The number of unemployed persons in Lincoln was 3,700 in March, 3,750 in February and 5,650 in March a year ago.

Omaha experienced a slight decline in unemployment. The rate was 6.7% in March, a drop from 6.9% in February and 9.1% in March, 1976. The number of Omahans out of work was 16,850 in March, 17,950 in February and 23,300 in March, 1976.

The total labor force in Nebraska in March stood at 665,200 while in Omaha it was 251,300; in Lincoln 99,400 and in outstate Nebraska, 314,500. The unemployment rate outstate was 4.1 per cent with 14,150 persons not working.

G.I. to host pharmacy group

Grand Island — Approximately 300 persons are expected to attend the 94th annual convention of the Nebraska Pharmaceutical Association here April 22-24.

Dr. L. Kirk Benedict, associated with the University of Nebraska College of Pharmacy in Omaha, serves as president of the organization; his wife is head of the auxiliary.

Gaylon L. King of Lexington will be installed as president of the Nebraska Pharmaceutical Association during the convention's closing session.

On April 24 the pharmacists will honor 31 men who received their pharmacy registration 50 years ago. Eight of the honorees will attend the convention.

The honorees are:

Richard S. Broyles and Clarence I. Wood, both of Lincoln; Harold E. Axtell of Beatrice; Eldon E. Baker, Robert K. Kirkman and Wallace W. Palmer, all of Sun City, Ariz.; Harold F. Bowers of Paxton; George W. Burkard of Alhambra, Calif.; John D. Cash of Algona, Iowa; W.S. Chambers of Neligh; Francis J. Crahan of Avoca, Iowa.

Leo J. Derezinski and Lance P. Seward, both of Omaha; John H. Gross of Hemingford; Roy L. Hahn of Grand Island; Kenneth E. Harris of Ashland; Louis H. Held of Hildreth; Owen G. Horst of Laguna Hills, Calif.; E. Fay Hulscher of Hastings; Einar A. Johnson of Harlingen, Tex.; Paul S. MacDougal of Santa Barbara, Calif.

Elmer M. McGinnis of Norfolk; Dr. Harold B. Miller of Estes Park, Colo.; John P. Mulligan of David City; Kermit S. Kautz of Homer; William T. Kretke of Boulder, Colo.; Ralph R. Reemts of Kimball; George A. Seeger of Schuyler; Albert B. Sell of Albuquerque, N. Mex.; C. Eiden Thompson of Farnam and W.H. Vodehnal of North Loup.

OPPD plant's building costs up $10 million

Omaha (AP) — Construction costs at the Omaha Public Power District's (OPPD) Nebraska City plant have increased by $10 million, it was announced Thursday.

Board Chairman Rosemary Skrupa said she didn't think a rate increase would be needed, because the $10 million cost increase already has been figured with the district's projected rate schedule.

The increase brings the total cost of the coal-burning plant to about $425 million.

OPPD directors Thursday discussed a $170 million bond issue to finance the plant's construction costs. The utility previously had planned to secure $160 million in revenue bonds to finish the project.

Mrs. Skrupa said one reason the extra money was needed was that clay was used as fill material instead of sand at the Nebraska City site. Contractors trying to install steel pilings couldn't drive through the clay, resulting in costly delays to the project, she said.

The Nebraska City plant is scheduled to begin operation in May 1979.

Funeral services set for N. Platte physician

North Platte — Funeral services for Dr. Orval C. Kreymsborg, 73, retired North Platte physician and nationally known fire fighting educator, will be at 11 a.m. Saturday at the Episcopal Church of Our Savior in North Platte. He died Wednesday night.

Dr. Kreymsborg was recently honored by the North Platte Fire Department for outstanding service and dedication. He began his career in 1929 with the Brainard Fire Department and joined the North Platte Department in 1942.

He was one of the organizers of the Nebraska State Fire School and was the author of "Fire Fighters First Aid," a textbook used by firemen.

A 1927 graduate of the University of Nebraska School of Medicine, Dr. Kreymsborg came to North Platte in 1942.

Surviving are his wife, Jane; sons, Lon C. of Tulsa, Okla., and James K. of Oklahoma City, Okla.; stepson, Thomas Cheney and a stepdaughter, Susan Cheney, both of Sheboygan, Wis.; and five grandchildren.

Ex-Perkins clerk killed in mishap

Grant (AP) — Former Perkins County Clerk Harry Schalla, 63, died Thursday in a tractor accident on his farm.

Sheriff Tony Nowak said Schalla was hooking up a disc to the tractor when he apparently engaged the clutch. The tractor backed up and pinned Schalla against the disc, killing him instantly, Nowak said.

Visitors in his home saw the riderless tractor's wheels spinning and found Schalla, Nowak said.

Schalla retired as county clerk April 1.

Survivors include his widow, Marie; a son, Wendell, of Imperial; and two daughters, Anna Marie Wells of Grant and Marilyn Barnum of San Pedro, Calif.

Funeral services will be Monday at 2 p.m. at the Grant Methodist Church.

One-car accident kills Omahan

Bellevue (AP) — A one-car accident west of Bellevue late Thursday night killed Richard L. Anderson, 28, of Omaha.

The State Patrol said Anderson was alone in a westbound car that struck a bridge abutment on Highway 370 one-half mile west of Bellevue.

The auto flew about 65 feet, landed on its top and slid 148 feet.

The death raised Nebraska's 1977 traffic fatality toll to 87, compared with 75 at this time last year.

Omaha's overall crime rate down 15%

Omaha (UPI) — The overall crime rate in Omaha during the first three months of 1977 was down 15% compared with the same period last year, Police Chief Richard Andersen said Friday.

Reported rapes decreased 41%, from 49 to 29; assaults were down 8%, from 228 to 209; and thefts dropped by 24%, from 3,592 to 2,727.

Brothers indicted in beer theft

Omaha (UPI) — Two Lincoln brothers have been indicted by a federal grand jury for jumping the gun in selling Coors beer in Nebraska.

Clifford Pulec, 37, 1815 Prospect St., and his brother Robert, 32, 2903 Randolph St., face one charge each of theft from an interstate shipment in connection with the disappearance of 279 cases of Coors.

The government alleged Wednesday the Pulecs were driving a truck loaded with Coors from Oklahoma City to New York City last July 17 when they made a stop in Lincoln.

The two allegedly sold the 279 cases of Coors in front of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Club in Lincoln and then proceeded to New York.

The Golden, Colo., based beer company is in the process of setting up legitimate distributorships in Nebraska.

Cavanaugh: Rebate decision surprising

Omaha (AP) — Rep. John Cavanaugh said Thursday he was surprised to learn President Carter changed his mind about a $50 tax rebate.

Carter said Thursday economic improvements led him to abandon the idea.

Cavanaugh supported the rebate proposal when it was passed by the House.

NEEDLE and THREAD

Amazing the miracles that can be wrought with needle and thread!
Provided, of course, the needle and thread are in the right hands.
Tools and materials are never more important than the skills of the craftsman who uses them.
In the realm of the spiritual, God has provided us with many resources. They inspire constructive living, dedicated service, devotion to high ideals.
But what we accomplish in our spiritual quest depends most of all on the skills we acquire through parental example and religious training. The churches of our community are helping us train a new generation to design a better tomorrow — using God's pattern.

Carter orders change

Washington (UPI) — President Carter has ordered revision of immigration standards, to reduce the number of illegal aliens in the United States without mass evictions.

"WHY DO THE HEATHEN RAGE?"

Psalms 2 and Acts 4:25

Fifty or more years ago a news item told of a man who ran afoul of law in Canada. At that time Canada used a "whipping post" and a certain fellow due on that post escaped to the U.S.A. It was reported that he stated he would rather remain in this country and be tried for murder than go back home and take their medicine!

God Almighty's Word says whip an evil man — not more than forty stripes — and boys, and it still uncontrollable put them to death.

The first recorded words of The Lord Jesus Christ after his baptism by John Baptist were: "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God!" — Matthew and Luke 4:4. If you are not striving to learn and live by "EVERY WORD THAT PROCEEDETH OUT OF THE MOUTH OF GOD ALMIGHTY" you ought to have integrity enough to resign and get out of His Church. If in a position to do so this witness would surely refuse to serve you the Communion Elements. John Calvin said the one who eats and drinks unprepared "swallows the wrath of God."

"Beware meddling with God." The Apostle Paul tells us there are some who should be "turned over to Satan" that the spirit might be saved in The Day of The Lord Jesus!

If we find out — and we will — but maybe too late, that a whipping post and gallows faithfully used will soon cut crime to a minimum, doubtless we will tilt the bill of those of whom

The Prophet Daniel speaks: "MANY OF THEM THAT SLEEP IN THE DUST OF THE EARTH SHALL AWAKE. — AND SOME TO SHAME AND EVERLASTING CONTEMPT!" Daniel 12:2.

"We may give our children everything that money can buy, position, popularity, influence, ease, education, pleasure, travel. But if we have not helped them where they would rather die than be false, where they prefer poverty to duty dishonored, where they would rather go hungry than tell a lie, starve than steal, wear rags than be arrayed at the price of duty and duplicity, we are only a cheap counterfeit of parenthood!"

If your parents do not bring you to the place where you would rather die than be false, where you prefer poverty to duty dishonored, where you would rather go hungry than tell a lie, starve than steal, wear rags than be arrayed at the price of duty and duplicity, The Lord Jesus Christ will surely do so if you hear Him call:

"COME UNTO ME, ALL YE THAT LABOR AND ARE HEAVY LADEN, AND I WILL GIVE YOU REST. TAKE MY YOKE UPON YOU, AND LEARN OF ME: FOR I AM MEEK AND LOWLY IN HEART, AND YE SHALL FIND REST UNTO YOUR SOULS, FOR MY YOKE IS EASY, AND MY BURDEN IS LIGHT." Matthew 11:27-30.

"TAKE MY YOKE UPON YOU, AND LEARN OF ME!"

Genealogical magazines provide solid advice, invaluable ad columns

Editor's note: This is the last of six articles on tracing your family roots.

By Dick Rance

One of the pleasant things about genealogy is the opportunities you will have to share your findings with other researchers all over the country. Even more pleasant than sharing what you've learned with others is the experience of having a letter arrive with the answer to a genealogical problem that has been puzzling you for years.

It is becoming much easier to get in touch with those who are working on the same family trees as you are because of the rise in popularity of genealogical magazines.

One publication that is almost an institution among family researchers is The Genealogical Helper, published every other month by the Everton Publishers, P.O. Box 368, Logan, UT 84321.

The Helper has built its following on the premise that somewhere there is someone who has the genealogical information you need — and the way to find that person is through the advertising columns of this or similar publication.

The Helper also contains:

—Directories of "family associations" — groups of people usually descended from the same individual or drawn together by the fact they are interested in the same family name.

—Directories of professional genealogists you can hire to do research for you.

—Articles containing aids for genealogical research.

—Review of new or reprinted genealogical reference books and family histories and genealogies.

—Display advertisements for countless genealogical aids.

If you get stuck on a particular line, you might want to advertise in The Helper or some similar publication. The rate for The Helper is moderate,

Searching Your Family Tree

while subscriptions to some other publications often entitle you to a free query.

If you do follow this route, you'll find that the more specific you are in your ad, the better results you'll have.

If your advertisement is worded like this sample, you may get some good responses:

"Need parents of James L. Baker, born Ohio, 1812; married Sue Allen in Bartholomew County, Ind., in 1837; lived in Warren County, Ind., 1850 census. Who were her parents? Was George Baker, Bartholomew County 1850 census, James' brother or cousin?"

Always offer to pay the costs of copies of material you request or to reimburse for other out-of-pocket expenses. And always be courteous enough to include a self-addressed stamped envelope (SASE) when you are asking someone to provide you with information.

You should keep a copy of all the letters you send, for often it will be difficult from the reply to determine exactly what information you included in your original.

Through the years you no doubt will meet several fifth or sixth cousins for the first time and you'll acquire a number of "genealogical pen pals" who are working on the same lines you are. If a trip takes you to where these people live, drop them a note in advance and ask if you can call them or stop by. Looking through someone else's files sometimes can give you a fresh insight to your research problem and often you can pick up new information.

There are a number of stores that specialize in buying and selling old family histories and genealogies. If you know that a history of your family was published but are unable to locate a copy of it, you might try one of these places.

You can write these firms and get a copy of their current catalog — usually only a dollar. Even if you're not planning to buy these early books (some are quite expensive), these catalogs can provide you with names of books about some of your family lines and allow you to check for these in libraries you may visit.

A few of these companies:

—Genealogical Publishing Co., Inc., 521-523 St. Paul Place, Baltimore, MD 21202. This company also specializes in reprinting old local histories and genealogical reference books.

—Goodspeed's Book Shop, 18 Beacon Street, Boston, MA 02108. Perhaps the largest dealer in this field. The catalog is delightful reading in itself.

—Charles E. Tuttle Company, Rutland, VT 05701. Another large dealer in old genealogies.

Dulcimer part of rich Scottsbluff music lore

By Deb Gray
Star Staff Writer

When former First Lady Betty Ford listened to Albert Fahlbusch play his hammered dulcimer at the Smithsonian Institute last summer, she lingered for 15 minutes longer than at any other booth.

Small wonder. The music Fahlbusch plays is not like the music heard anywhere else in the country.

But to Scottsbluff people, the music is common enough.

The dulcimer is an integral part of their German dance bands. It's a trapezoid-shaped stringed instrument, played with mallets, that carries the melodies of those German folk songs, polkas and waltzes.

Fahlbusch is one of about six dulcimer players in Scottsbluff.

He was in Lincoln this week to participate in the first Plains Week festival at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. The festival, which ended Friday, featured craftsmen displaying pieces of a heritage — objects that depict the life and folklore of Nebraska.

Scottsbluff is the center of a rich heritage of Russian-German music. No other music tradition like it thrives in the United States, according to Roger Welsch, folklorist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

There's another concentration of German-Russian dulcimer players in Michigan, but their music is different. Up there, they call the dulcimer a "lumberjack piano," Welsch said.

The tunes they play are influenced by the tunes of a logging tradition, he said.

The dulcimer is an ancient instrument, Welsch said. It is descended from instruments used in biblical times. It was the "granddaddy" of the piano.

Welsch said the Germans imported the instrument from the eastern Mediterranean region. When some German people migrated to Russia, they took the dulcimer with them.

They synthesized the folk music of their native Germany, their adopted Russia and the eastern Mediterranean region.

When the German-Russians immigrated to America in the early 1880s, they brought this music with them.

Fahlbusch said he grew up in one of these German-Russian homes in Scottsbluff.

He said he always wanted to learn to play a dulcimer; it was always one of his favorite instruments.

In 1952, his chance to play one arrived. He bought a dulcimer from his neighbor.

At the time, he had been laid off from his job, so he had time to spend around the house, learning to play the instrument himself.

Two or three weeks after he started practicing, he landed his first job in a dance band.

For the next 11 years after Fahlbusch bought his first dulcimer, he thought about making one of his own. He wanted to make one that sounded the way he liked it. That first one, he said, was "rough-sounding."

Fahlbusch has made 35 dulcimers. Four of them are in his home.

The demand for dulcimers is not that great. "The ones that want it are the ones that watch us play," Fahlbusch said.

Fahlbusch has passed some of his dulcimer-playing knowledge on to his son Roger.

But the dulcimer is his son's secondary interest, he said.

Roger Fahlbusch likes hard rock best.

Woodworker carves guitar bodies.

Gibson guitars are made in old Kalamazoo factory

Kalamazoo, Mich. (AP) — From raw wood to finished product, it takes nearly 18 weeks to complete a Gibson guitar.

But customers of the modest, aging factory tucked behind an elementary school on a Kalamazoo side street are willing to wait for what they consider the best guitars in the world.

Gibson guitars start at $460 for a basic, acoustic model and range through 79 other models to the Citation electric at $4,000.

Nearly 300 woodworkers turn out the guitars favored by such music stars as Peter Frampton, Terry Kath of Chicago, Keith Richards from the Rolling Stones, and Ron Wood of the Stones. B. B. King's famed "Lucille" is a Gibson Citation.

Orville Gibson, a Kalamazoo shoe clerk, started the firm in 1894 as a maker of mandolins. When popular taste switched to the banjo, his company went along and then moved into guitar making.

Working habits at Gibson differ from most factories. The company's lone conveyor belt sits still much of the time as workers ponder over instruments before sending them along to the next step in production.

Only about 300 instruments per day emerge from the plant and then only after approval from a pair of "final adjusters." They fine tune the instruments and play them while searching for defects.

The instruments are made from such woods as mahogany, rosewood, spruce, maple and ebony, which are laminated together and then bound with yards of tight tape.

In a tiny sector of the plant basement, six of the firm's most skilled workers handbuild guitars for the firm's most demanding customers.

"These guitars are so personally valuable to their owners that they won't even take them on tour for fear they might be scratched," a company spokesman reported.

Another section of the plant houses the "Red Tag" room where the guitars of the stars are sent for refurbishing and customizing.

Final sanding is done carefully by hand.

Should a bachelor be invited to bring own date?

DEAR ABBY: I am a reasonably attractive, well-mannered bachelor in my late 30s who receives many social invitations. I recently turned down an invitation to a dinner party. I frankly told the hostess that I was no longer accepting invitations that did not allow me to bring my own date. Very rarely she told me that if I didn't want to go to parties alone I should get married.

Why do so many people think a single person should be eager to accept invitations to go to a party alone? I always feel like a fifth wheel, or else I get stuck with a dateless woman who shares my embarrassment. Am I wrong?

SINGLE SIMON

DEAR SIMON: If you'd rather bring your own date than gamble on what the hostess has paired you off with, say so. But most bachelors are invited to parties to provide escorts for the single women. And I'd like to see the dateless woman who would feel "embarrassed" to find her dinner companion a reasonably attractive, well-mannered bachelor.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: For a long time I've suspected that my husband had an apartment or room, or girlfriend somewhere because he would leave home in a gray suit and come back in navy blue.

When I first called him on this, he tried to make me believe I was losing my mind.

I am sure there is nothing wrong with me, and he is obviously changing clothes somewhere. What do you think of a man like that?

WILDTOWN HOUSEWIFE

DEAR HOUSEWIFE: I think your husband has: (1) more suits than he needs; (2) a closet elsewhere; (3) a very poor memory.

DEAR ABBY: I'm about the most unexcitable bride you've ever heard from. Our wedding date has been set and the plans are being made, but right now all I want to do is run. Jerry is a wonderful young man and I should be thrilled to get him, but now I'm sorry I ever said yes.

Here are some examples of why I am not sure I want to marry him. My mother says there are tricks. Please tell me what to think.

I have seen Jerry in the pool and found out he couldn't swim. I had to rescue him. Abby, shouldn't he have told me? And here's a man who loves sailing and fishing.

2. His family likes to hug and kiss me. I'm not a cold person, but I don't like all that hugging and kissing on saying hello and goodbye.

3. Jerry's job will require more and more traveling. I suppose I could go with him, but what if I can't? I'm afraid to stay alone.

4. Jerry likes children, and I'm not sure I want any. I'm really afraid of childbirth because of a movie I saw years ago.

What should I do? I really love Jerry. I'm 22, a college graduate, but I don't want to take a job. Is it too late to back out?

NOT READY

DEAR NOT: Your solution is in your signature. You are NOT ready for marriage. Call it off and the sooner the better.

DEAR ABBY: I have two very important questions: Does epilepsy cause mental retardation or insanity? And is it safe for an epileptic to work, marry, drive a car, have children, and do things other people can do?

TROUBLED

DEAR TROUBLED: Epilepsy is merely a symptom. It cannot "cause" anything.

Most people with epilepsy are of normal intelligence. In most cases, epilepsy patients have far fewer seizures if they lead active, normal lives. Most of them can work, participate in sports, drive a car (if they have complete seizure control), marry, and have children.

In some states epileptics are not permitted to marry, but this attitude is slowly changing.

The bidding:

Opening lead - king of spades.

Dear Mr. Becker: I thought you might like to know about my most recent moment of glory in bridge. I was South and got to four hearts on the bidding shown.

West led the K-A of spades and I ruffed with the seven. You may think that trumping with the seven, instead of the deuce, was a vulgar display of riches, but actually this play was the key to my making the contract.

I next led the ace of trumps on which West showed out. Things looked black at this point, since it seemed virtually certain I'd lose a spade, two trumps and a diamond and go down one. But, undaunted, I carried on and wound up making the contract as a result of my play at trick two.

I rashed the A-K of diamonds, the A-K-Q of clubs, played another diamond, and East found himself on lead in this position:

East was now helpless, whatever he returned. Actually, he played a spade. I ruffed with the deuce, overruffed it in dummy with the five, and returned a trump. East went up with the jack, but I played the eight on it and won the last two tricks with the K-10 of trumps.

If East had led the queen of hearts in the diagrammed position, I would have played my eight on it and won the last three tricks — whatever he played next.

But note that if my last four cards had been the K-10-8-7, instead of the K-10-8-2, there would have been no way for me to make the contract.

Sincerely yours, Constant Reader.

NSAA loosens grip on prep sports

By Randy York
Prep Sports Editor

It may not have been a calculated move. But Friday's action by the Nebraska School Activities Assn. (NSAA) Representative Assembly may have signaled a less aggressive role for the NSAA of the future.

In its annual rules-making session at the Cornhusker Hotel, the 51-member legislative body voted:

- to reject proposals to reduce competition in basketball, track, golf and volleyball, indicating that decision rests more in the hands of local school boards than the state association.
- to lift a long-standing policy of trying to control prep coaches and athletes in the summer when their sports are not in season, assuming the stance to avoid potential legal problems.
- to deal less directly with junior high school athletics, voting to offer those associate members guidelines for their programs rather than rules and regulations.

Almost lost in the shuffle of that general trend was a surprisingly lopsided vote (48-3) to move the Class A boys golf season from a spring to a fall sport. That means approximately five months after this spring's Class A state golf tournament, another will be contested next fall.

Dr. Tom Hallstrom, physical education and athletic coordinator for the Omaha Public Schools, presented the proposal to the Representative Assembly. He cited a facility crunch for the state's larger communities during the spring and offered a recent straw vote, showing 22 of 31 Class A athletic directors favored the switch.

Jim Riley, sitting in the executive secretary's chair for the first time at a Representative Assembly, expressed satisfaction with the smoothness of Friday's session and the less aggressive NSAA role endorsed by the delegates.

"I don't see what happened today as a rejection of our study committee's efforts to cut back certain sports," he said. "I think it was an acknowledgement that there is a problem, but that schools and local boards of education should solve that problem, based on their needs and their own programs."

Riley noted the Representative Assembly voted to restrict a school to nine regularly scheduled football games. There had been no previous restriction. "I think that's a positive step and showed the committee was beneficial," he said.

The NSAA chief admitted he had mixed emotions on lessening the grip over prep athletes in the summer, but only from the standpoint "that I can foresee some potential coaching abuse."

Basically, Riley sees the NSAA's new role without summer control as relief. "I think a school can control its local situation best," he said. "I kind of wanted them to run with the ball for awhile. In the past, we've always been left holding the bag."

According to Riley, NSAA attorneys felt "that if we permitted baseball coaches to coach in the summer under the guise of another team name, other activities should be afforded the same opportunities."

The Representative Assembly, as reflected in a 44-7 vote, agreed with Riley. It passed a proposal, allowing individual schools virtually complete freedom in opening their gymnasiums in the summer.

That means a basketball coach, for instance, can work with any number of players without fear of violating NSAA rules and suffering subsequent penalties.

Even though there no longer will be restrictions on coaches and athletes during the summer, a member school still may not sponsor a team or individual, provide uniforms or player equipment or otherwise be responsible for students in summer competition.

A school may organize and sponsor a 21-day clinic in any sport after school closes for the summer months, however.

"Basically," Riley said, "coaches and kids can do what they want in the summer as long as there is no school affiliation."

"I don't agree with the specialization theory or that the purpose of high school athletics is to groom a scholarship athlete or prepare someone for Olympic competition," he added.

"It's up to the schools to manage the problem. Parents are also going to have to help. It may not be the best situation in certain circumstances, but the way conditions are now, I think this is the right answer."

Missouri drops Nebraska twice; 2 on tap today

Columbia, Mo. — Something was bound to give here Friday, and, unfortunately for Nebraska fans, it was the Husker win streak which ended as Missouri swept a Big 8 baseball doubleheader, 5-0 and 3-2.

Nebraska owned a 12-game win streak heading into the contests while Missouri had won six in a row.

The Tigers Rob Pietroburgo was masterful in shutting out the Huskers on a two-hitter in the opener. He fanned eight, issued no walks and retired the last 17 in a row while raising his record to 5-1.

Missouri got off to a 4-0 start with ace Nebraska hurler Kirk Eymann on the mound. Right-fielder Tim Laudner drove in one run with a single, third baseman Mike Lally knocked in two more runs with a homer and leftfielder Jim Leavitt hit a solo circuit blast.

The final Missouri tally came in the third when Laudner singled in the run.

Eymann, now 2-2, allowed four earned runs on seven hits, walked three and struck out one.

In the second contest Nebraska grabbed a 2-1 lead in the second inning as Larry Winum scored on a balk by the pitcher and Doug Miller knocked in a run on a single.

Missouri got the winning runs in the third on a run-scoring double by shortstop Greg Cypret and a RBI single by Laudner.

Jeff Costello hurled the distance for Nebraska, giving up

Osborne pleased as spring drills on homeward leg

By Dave Sittler
Staff Sports Writer

Having gone over the hump, or midway point, of spring football drills, Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne said Friday that he is generally pleased with his squad's progress.

After sending the Cornhuskers through practice No. 11 of the scheduled 20 spring drills, Osborne said the brightest spot of the practices has been the lack of injuries.

"This is the fewest number of people we've had missing because of injuries in a long time," Osborne said. "Usually we have 10 or 12 missing by this time each spring, but we only have four or five out now and none of the injuries appear to be anything that will carry over next fall."

Middle guard Odious Lee is the only player lost for the spring (with a fractured wrist). Others missing Friday's workout include Greg Jorgensen (groin), Kent Smith (foot), Pat Lehigh (hip pointer), Tom Sorley (shoulder), and Rick Berns (charlie horse).

Osborne indicated those players would miss Saturday's scrimmage, which is set for 1:30 p.m. at Memorial Stadium and is open to the public.

The Cornhusker coach said he was encouraged with the team's attitude, noting, "we've done some new things offensively and defensively which have caused some uncertainty. But the players' attitudes have been good. Wednesday they were hitting in the scrimmage as hard as they have hit in a long time."

During Friday's drills, which were hampered by intermittent rain showers, the Huskers spent a good portion of time working on the kicking game.

Osborne said split end Tim Smith had looked good in the punting, a long with placekickers Dean Sukup and Billy Todd. "We might have some kickers with a little stronger legs than we've had in the past," Osborne said. "We don't know about their accuracy and speed under pressure, but they have been kicking the ball further."

Osborne said Saturday's scrimmage would see the top offensive and defensive units work against each other on two separate 15-play series. A third 15-play series will pit the 7 teams against the No. 2 teams.

Upset over the offenses' performance last Saturday, Osborne said he would be looking for better execution and a lack of turnovers Saturday by the offense.

"I'm not so worried about scoring as I am execution," Osborne said. "We want to evaluate players and eliminate mistakes. It's possible the first two units might not score all day and we could still be satisfied. But you always hope to score at least a couple times."

Lexington triumphs

Central City — Bill Ourada of Crete won three events and teammate Ray Miller won two, but Lexington, which had three individual and two relay winners, won the team title in the Central City Invitational Friday.

"I'm not so worried about scoring as I am execution," Osborne said. "We want to evaluate players and eliminate mistakes. It's possible the first two units might not score all day and we could still be satisfied. But you always hope to score at least a couple times."

Ourada clocked 9.9 and 23.1 in winning the 100 and 220-yard dashes. He also won the long jump with a leap of 21-10. Miller doubled in the distance vents, taking the mile in 4:36.6 and the two mile in 9:51.7.

Craig Moon of Grand Island Northwest was also a double winner with clockings of 51.5 in the 440 and 2:06 in the 880.

Lexington's individual winners were Mike Mandelko (148-1 in the discus), Mark Neil (6-4 in the high jump), and Bill Dannehl (21.4 in the 180-yard low hurdles). The Minutemen also won the 880 and mile relays.

The mark was set in a dual Beatrice-Fairbury meet won by the visiting Orangemen, 95-41, in a steady rain.

Photographer keynote speaker at banquet

By Tom Vint
Outdoor Editor

Glenn Chambers, wildlife photographer of national fame and fortune, feels fortunate to be in the field.

"I get to go into the woods and get behind trees to photograph the things you people see and hear about," Chambers told the crowd at the University of Nebraska Wildlife Club's annual awards banquet Friday night.

Honored at the dinner were University of Nebraska Wildlife Club outstanding students Ed Jochum and Phil Hilgert. Also honored were Ken Petska, as winner of the Sunday Journal and Star Howard L. Weigers Award for outstanding conservation and the Otter County Wildlife Club of Nebraska City, winner of the Nebraska Outstanding Wildlife Club Award for 1977.

Chambers, the featured speaker of the evening, presented a slide program on wildlife photography. He is a wildlife biologist and photographer for the Missouri Department of Conservation, having won numerous awards for photography.

Chambers' work has appeared in such magazines as the National Audubon Magazine, National Wildlife and Ranger Rick. He has other works pending for National Geographic.

"There are wildlife photographers and there are wildlife photographers," Chambers said. "The super photographers come through with sharp, clean pictures. Patience persists. It takes a lot of time to get really good photographs."

One of the things he suggests is getting scenery shots to go along with your photographic works.

"It's an important aspect of wildlife photography," Chambers said. "Get pictures of your surroundings to kind of set the mood for your viewers. I like to get an overall shot, then take several closeups for more detailed work."

Wildlife photography has taken the Missouri biologist to numerous states, to the Hudson Bay shores near the Arctic and other points of interest. But one of the high points he said he's witnessed is Nebraska's annual migration of sandhill cranes along the Platte River.

"It's really spectacular to see these birds," he said. "But to get good crane shots, you're going to have to have some patience. You're going to have to have some long lenses. And you're going to have to spend some time."

"They are a spectacular bird but very hard to photograph because they are so wary. They pick out changes in their surrounding landscape very easily. You can't expect to go out and set up a blind and figure they'll come in for you the same day. What you do is find yourself a good sandbar, set up a blind early in the migration and figure on leaving it there for a couple of weeks."

"The birds will get used to it and then you can go in to take your pictures. Take your sleeping bag and lunch. Spend the night with them if you really want good crane shots. It takes a lot of time."

Patience and a careful eye on what you're doing is a key to good work, he said. And the use of as short a lens as you can get away with.

"Many people think all they need is the longest lens they can get and they're a wildlife photographer," Chambers said. "For me, I'll take a shorter lens for greater quality. And remember, anything is fair in wildlife photography."

NU-bound Meyer leads Fremont triumph

By Chuck Sinclair
Prep Sports Writer

Fremont — Fremont high jumper Larry Meyer signed a letter of intent with the University of Nebraska Friday, then wasted little time showing why he earned it leaping 7-0 to lead the Tigers to a runaway win in the Fremont Invitational track meet.

Meyer narrowly missed his third try at 7-1, attempting to tie his best all-time competitive jump.

Like a swarm of bees, the crowd that had encompassed the semi-circle jump area, moved to the pole vault immediately following the high jump to watch the other main attraction, Fremont's Randy Raymond.

Owning the Nebraska all-time prep best of 15-6 1/2, Raymond cleared 15-1 easily and draised the bar to 15-9 1/2 for his record attempt.

Like Meyer, Raymond nearly cleared the height on his final attempt, but had to settle for 15-1, a half inch under the meet record he set last year.

Those performances weren't really surprises for coach John Appleget.

Perhaps the biggest surprise, and not a very pleasant one, was from Fremont discus thrower Erik Korshol.

Leading the state with a 171-6 toss earlier this year, Korshol scratched on all three of his preliminary throws, failing to qualify for the finals.

Triple jumper Don Bice made up for that, however, with a 46-3 1/2 first-place upset win over Lincoln Northeast's Craig Bence, the state leader at 46-11.

In leading a near-Fremont field event sweep, the talented Meyer figured he may have had a better chance at 7-1 with some different prejump strategy.

He may have started too early.

"I think I'll probably start the rest of the meets at 6-6," said Meyer, who began Friday at 6-4. "It depends on how well I jump in warmups."

"I popped 6-6 and 6-8 in practice today so I probably should have passed to 6-6," he added.

Meyer cleared his first four heights, 6-4 through 6-10, on his first attempt. But he had to jump three times to make 7-0 and tried another three at 7-1.

"I really wasn't as psyched for this meet as I was for Millard (where he cleared 7-1)," he admitted. "The weather was perfect at Millard and it left a little bit to be desired here today."

"But coach Murphy said I had cleared my jump at 7-0 by at least two inches," he added. "I thought that jump felt better than all my jumps at 7-1."

Lincoln Southeast, sparked by double individual winner Larry Gilliland in the hurdle events, placed second in the team standings with 102, compared to Fremont's 128.

Northeast's Mike Sales led the Rockets to a fourth place finish with a double in the sprints.

Grand Island's girls team won that division handily, 154-108 over host Fremont.

The Islanders were keyed by a one-two-three sweep in the discus and one-two in the shot put with Paula Evans winning both events.

The meet started under warm, windy conditions, but finished under a steady drizzle.

Omaha Royals win opener

Evansville, Ind. (AP) — Omaha's Clint Hurdle hit a triple in the sixth to drive in two runs as the Royals defeated the Evansville Triplets 2-0 in the opening American Association baseball game here Friday.

L. Washington and Joe LeHoud both scored on Hurdle's hit.

Evansville catcher Bill Flowers prevented another Royals' run by tagging Omaha's Gary Martz at home plate when tried to stretch another Hurdle double into a run.

This opening season game for both team and the beginning of a five game series here

Neither winds nor rains could keep mo st of the Lincoln Public Schools girls track meet records intact Friday as Lincoln High captured the team championship and won four events, three in record time.

Seven meet records were broken and one was tied on the wet East High Stuart Stadium track as the Links topped the field with 65 points, followed by Southeast with 52, East with 50 and Northeast with 29.

Lincoln High's Teresa Schoonover successfully defended her mile and 880-yard run titles and ran a leg on the record setting mile relay team, while teammate Robin Hruby snapped the meet's discus mark in defending her title.

Hruby, who won the discus with a throw of 140-6 1/2, finished second to Northeast's Terri Woods in the shot, who won the event with a toss of 42-9 1/2, a new meet record.

LNE's Kelly Els topped the 80-yard hurdle mark with a time of 11.05, while Suzanne Sattion of Southeast, snapped the 440-yard dash mark in the record time of 1:00.1, and the East 880-yard relay team clipped 12 seconds off the old mark, winning in a time of 1:48.3. Debbie Hill of East tied the high jump record with a 5-2 mark.
